3. Justification in the curriculum, relation to other subjects and to the profession

The subject "Ethical and Legal Aspects of Nursing" is included in the Basic Training of the Nursing Degree. It is related to all the subjects of the "Nursing Sciences" block and those of the "Clinical Practice" block, as any caregiving activity must take into account the ethical-legal conditions linked to responsible, quality professional practice that respects the rights of patients and their families.

The aim of this course for the student is to acquire knowledge about the legislation that regulates and/or affects professional practice, as well as the ethical aspects derived from professional practice. The scientific-technological advances of the last decades have had a great repercussion in the health professions, which constantly face ethical-legal problems that test the capacity to understand, analyze, argue and face conflicts.

Its development includes general concepts on Ethics, values related to civic ethics, human rights and the ethics of care. The Deontological Code of Spanish Nursing and its practical implications are analysed, as well as the origins of Bioethics and its principles for tackling bioethical dilemmas. All this, considering the legal system and with the aim of providing care committed to the health and welfare of patients, taking into account the context and cultural peculiarities of each person.
